

look book

Modern Woman

There's more to smelling feminine than rose gardens and powder.

John Galiano Parlez-Moi d'Amour EDT, $73-$121

There's a Lolita quality about this. It's candy-like and young, but smoky notes of cypress and patchouli hints of seduction.

L Loewe EDT, $79-$102

This citrus-floral mix is sweetly inviting and easy to wear, and has a light aliveness that doesn't shout for attention.

Elizabeth Arden Pretty Hot EDP, $95-$115

The spin-off of the brand's Pretty scent, this is sexier with sandalwood, amber and tonka for spicy, big hearted warmth.

DKNY limited edition Be Delicious Juiced EDT, $75

It's apple-fruity, but with a crispness that keeps it from being teenage sweetheart-ish.

Narciso Rodriguez Essence Eau de Muse EDT, $134-$182

Soapy and comforting, this recalls freshly laundered sheets and a warm duvet.

Lacoste Joy of Pink EDT, $67-$117

As subtly and fresh as sparkling juice, its prominent grapefruit note is an instant mood-lifter.

TOY YUEN YI YING MODEL PHOTO: PHOTOLIBRARY

Warning: It may turn blue eyes brown. But that didn't keep Latisse from flying off shelves in the US. Originally developed to treat glaucoma (damaged optic nerves), the eye solution promises to grow and thicken lashes in just two weeks and apparently delivers the goods. Now available at The Sloane Clinic and Calvin Chan Aesthetic & Laser Clinic, the doctors at both say there are no side effects on healthy peepers if the product is used as directed and care is taken to avoid it entering eyes. Consultations are also required before dispensing. Results last several weeks to a few months. $240

PRETTY EDGY

Babbi Brown has collaborated with girly casual-chic fashion house Tibi for its limited edition Peony & Python Palette ($95). In a snakeskin-and-peony print case, the palette has sweet pastel lilac, nude-chic ivory and deep purple for when you want to smoke things up.

f232

Warning: It may turn blue eyes brown. But that didn't keep Latisse from flying off shelves in the US. Originally developed to treat glaucoma (damaged optic nerves), the eye solution promises to grow and thicken lashes in just two weeks and apparently delivers the goods. Now available at The Sloane Clinic and Calvin Chan Aesthetic & Laser Clinic, the doctors at both say there are no side effects on healthy peepers if the product is used as directed and care is taken to avoid it entering eyes. Consultations are also required before dispensing. Results last several weeks to a few months. $240